WORD

The first to state his case seems right until another comes and cross-examines him.

Proverbs 18:7

There are at least two sides to every story and sometimes even more. We are always tempted to believe the first thing we hear about something or someone but its best if we take a step back and consider that there may be more to the story. Stories about situations are like Transformers, there is more to them than meets the eye (if you were born between 1980-1990 you'll appreciate that reference). Maybe the best example of this are those TV infomercials. You know the ones that are presenting this new cooking utensil or super cleaner that can remove any stain. Maybe the phrase "set it and forget it" rings a bell to you? We watch 10 minutes of these shows and we are convinced that what they are selling is the most genius product ever invented and we wonder why we didn't think of that. We then proceed to buy a case of what they are selling only to find that when it arrives its not really that good after all. We probably all have one of those magical products just sitting on a shelf somewhere and never use it. We give in to those things because we only hear one side of the story. The side that shows what they want you to see and hear. The side that covers all of the good and none of the bad. Often the stories we hear from or about people are the same way. We even have to be careful of the preaching and teaching we hear. At worst the person telling you the story may be a trouble maker or a deceptive preacher or at best they may simply just be stating what they believe to be the true and right story. Regardless of the motives of the one telling you a story the fact remains there are two sides to every story. So next time you are told something don't be so quick to gobble it up and condemn people for something that you think was done, there may be more to the story than you realize. After all Jesus knew our whole story, but died for us rather than condemn us. He gave us a chance to change our story from one of sin to one of forgiveness.
